

The Spirituality of Stewardship – Dan Conway (A good friend whom I, Fr. Robert, have known for 20 + years.)

The American bishops' pastoral letter, Stewardship: A Disciple's Response, describes a Christian steward as "one who receives God's gifts gratefully, cherishes and tends them in a responsible and accountable manner, and returns them with increase to the Lord." Thus, there are four characteristics of a Christian steward.

The first characteristic is gratitude. A Christian steward is "one who receives God's gifts gratefully." Gratitude assumes that we acknowledge God as the true owner of all that we have and all that we are. Gratitude to God, and to those who have shared themselves with us, helps us maintain a true sense of identity as Christ's disciples.

The second characteristic is accountability. A good steward is "one who cherishes and tends God's gifts in a responsible and accountable manner." Accountability reminds us that we are responsible for what we do (or fail to do) with our time, our talent, and our money. As Christ's disciples, we are responsible for building up God's kingdom, and on the Last Day, we will be held accountable.

The third characteristic is generosity. A Christian steward is "one who shares God's gifts with others out of justice and love." Generosity propels us outside of ourselves – often in ways that contradict our own interests. The lives of the saints give us countless examples of individuals whose generosity won them true freedom and joy. Giving is good for us; it is also right and just to share what we have been given with others.

The final characteristic is the willingness to give back to the Lord with increase. God wants us to take his gifts and develop them. A Christian steward is called to be productive, to make a difference in the world. Traditional Christian spirituality teaches us to give back to the Lord by means of the ascetical principles of prayer, fasting, and almsgiving. In prayer, we give back to God our time (and our hearts). By fasting, we deny ourselves the good things that we want and need; the more genuine our self-denial is, the more we flourish and grow. Through almsgiving, we share what God has given us with others; if we give from the heart, we gain infinitely more than we have given away. Prayer, self-denial, and sacrificial giving are the essence of what Christian stewardship is all about!

April 15, 2018
3rd Sunday of Easter

The risen Christ made himself known to his disciples. He encouraged the disciples in Jerusalem to look and to touch his wounds. He reminded them of what Scripture had foretold, just as Peter reminded the community the Good News of Jesus' resurrection.

LITURGY OF THE WORD

In the first reading, Peter called his listeners to repentance and salvation. In the second reading, John encourages believers to trust Jesus, their Advocate, and show their love for God by keeping his commandments. After having revealed himself in Emmaus in the breaking of the bread, the risen Christ manifested himself again to his disciples.
